Stream features: remote, swift water, rocky, A few rapids in spots
Excellent birding opportunities
Excellent Trout, Bass fishing.
Water levels: floatable all year
Spring Creek is very swift in spots and you should have some swift water paddling and rescue experience. The Bald Eagle Creek is less demanding but is still swift in spots.
The creeks are bordered by Bald Eagle Ridge and forested valley. There are many different species of birds including Bald Eagles, Ospreys, King Fishers, Blue Herons and many migratory bird species. Trout fishing is excellent on both streams and the Bass fishing is great on parts of the Bald Eagle Creek. There are a number of options for a paddling adventure depending on your paddling skills. TMO can tailor an outing to your needs.

You do not need to be an expert paddler but you do need to be physically capable of handling the watercraft on your own, be able to swim and self rescue in a swift current and have a sense of adventure. Kayakers should wear helmets while paddling Spring Creek or the Bald Eagle Creeks
Wear a lifejacket

What to bring

Canoeing and Kayaking is fun and exciting. Come prepared for the weather and water conditions.
Some items you may need to bring depending on weather conditions and duration of outing: water shoes, sun glasses, eye glass retainer straps, sun screen, waterproof containers, camera, food, beverages, cooler, ice, insect repellent, wide brim hat, proper clothing for wet, cold or hot conditions, shorts, swim suit, wind breaker or paddling jacket, wet suit, synthetic insulating clothing, first aid kit, fishing gear, binoculars, change of dry clothes at the end of your outing

What to Expect

Any one who canoes or kayaks can expect to take a swim when their canoe or kayak flips upside down. This can happen at any time and at any place on the water. You must be able to self rescue and be able to fend for yourself when a flip happens. This means you will need some swimming ability and must have the physical strength to help yourself and others with you in case of an emergency.
Basically you are on your own when you venture out on the water in a canoe or kayak. Always wear a lifejacket and a helmet

Paddling activities can be fun and exciting but you must be prepared for your outing. Check the weather and water conditions. If you need to take a cell phone or any other electronic devise make sure you place the item(s) in a water proof container and attach it to you or the paddle craft.
Know your limits, both physical limits and paddle skill limits.
Do not paddle alone
Give some one your outing destination
Find out the rules or regulations concerning paddle sport and the water ways
When encountering other paddlers or anglers try and keep your distance from them. Some times that means you must paddle out of their way or pull over along the stream and wait until your path is clear. Be pro active and try not to disturb them.
Be aware that streams and other water ways may have hazards that could place you in a dangerous situation. Swift rocky spots may capsize you, fallen trees and other debris that block the stream channel could entrap you. Cold swift water could cause you to get hypothermia.
Try to get some info on the section of waterway you will be paddling-be aware of your surroundings
